

A fee increase for the naturalization process is only going to contribute to the already existing issue of the abundant number of illegal immigrants that are in this country. If the process to become legal continues to become more difficult it is evident that this problem will only continue to grow instead of being resolved. If there are people already here legally why not keep the same minimum standards instead of increasing our existing problems.

Sincerely,

Carla Collins
Resident of South Carolina